Each year at this point in May, many of the cases before The Supreme Court have been decided. There are few that remain, and those that do often have the most intricacies. Join us for a discussion about the details of the remaining cases, the arguments given and what a decision on either side of the case may mean.

We are excited to welcome back Sterling Professor of Law and Political Science at Yale, Professor Akhil Amar to moderate the discussion between constitutional law scholars.

This event is open to the public and the media and will be live-streamed on WGBH. All attendees must register to attend.
